Our Story

For over a decade, Handmade in Jordan has remained flexible and dynamic, allowing it to develop and grow in line with the needs of its members, and the customers it serves. Twenty-six shows over fourteen years, held in Jordan, and with organisations as varied as RBG, Kew Gardens, Waterperry Gardens and the Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh – have secured its reputation. The last two years have seen Handmade in Jordan recognised by the Arts Council as part of the Covid Cultural Recovery Fund and lauded as winners in the Creative Cities Challenge.

The year of Covid has demanded more of every business in the Jordan and Handmade has characteristically risen to the challenge. It is now focused on supporting the digitisation of the craft sector through an R&D of new technologies (an essential development to futureproof craft industry); it will continue to increase accessibility and create new market opportunities; it will further strengthen its partnerships with art, design and craft communities.

It will promote local creative businesses to a wider network of audiences both nationally and internationally, while crucially reducing operational and infrastructure costs, by creating a self-sustaining revenue model. Finally, it will create tailor-made virtual solutions for creative businesses, allowing users to pick and choose features based on their individual needs and unique financial constraints.

Our Mission

Instruct, and inspire both the beginning and the established professional craftsman and crafts retailer by providing them with: how-to articles on all facets of handmade business management and related topics; relevant industry news, as well as information on current issues and trends; a forum for exchanging ideas and concerns; encouragement and recognition. We aim to facilitate greater exposure, and appreciation, of the making industry as a whole and to continue providing comprehensive support to established, and emerging, talent. To this end, our in-person shows will continue. After the trials of 2020 and early 2021 – and the need to reduce energy and fuel consumption – we have already committed to making our shows more sustainable and accessible to makers and visitors. In addition, as a growing business, we are at the forefront of new technologies.

The benefits of virtual selling are manifold: increasing the reach of our makers both within the UK and abroad and futureproofing the craft industry against unforeseen global events (as witnessed in the Covid pandemic). This approach lessens the need for travel on the part of makers and visitors, reducing the overall carbon footprint of the craft sector. An industry already known for its sustainable credentials can, with these innovations, become more sustainable still.
